FELIX VON HOFE

Felix von Hofe is fast becoming one of Australia's most exciting sports presenters and a former professional basketball player whose career spans elite sport, prime-time television, and national broadcasting. Known for his authentic style and ability to connect with audiences, Felix brings a unique blend of sporting expertise and media presence to everything he does.

Felix's journey began at the Australian Institute of Sport (AIS), where he developed a reputation as a disciplined athlete and elite shooter. He went on to play college basketball for Eastern Washington University, captaining the team, setting a record for most wins, and scoring over 1,000 points. Returning home, Felix signed with Melbourne United in the NBL and later played for the Melbourne

Tigers, before retiring from professional basketball.

Following his basketball career, Felix reached a new audience when he appeared on The Bachelor Australia franchise on Network Ten, where his authenticity, humility, and competitive spirit quickly made him a fan favourite. This experience launched his transition into mainstream media, showcasing a different side of the elite athlete and paving the way for his broadcasting career.

Today, Felix is a successful television sports presenter and a regular presence on Nine Network's sports coverage, including AFL show Players, Today Show, Weekend Today, and major AFL and NBL programming for ESPN. He is known for high-energy interviews, and a style that blends humour, insight, and authenticity. His work frequently sees him create bespoke content with leading AFL and NBL talent, UFC stars including Alex Volkanovski, and a growing list of major Australian athletes.
